

LIBER

vel Agricola

SUB FIGURÂ
XXIV

On the Fruits of that Marriage between Babe and Mother

VXVXVXV
LXVXVXV

Ecce Homo Adversus Tempora

Publication in Class A

Liber XXIV ✠ vel Agricola

0. The Babe that becomes the Master is ever attracted to its Mother.
1. For he suckles at Her breasts with reckless abandon.
2. The time of the feeding, the time of the kneading and the rising, so long practiced, all Knowledge, all Conversation, led him unto Her arms.
3. There is no other, there canst be no other, even as She bids him to sample the bounty of Her earth.
4. Oh, how he SHALL sample that bounty.
5. And none compare to the succor of his Mother, the ripeness of Her loins.
6. For to that end is Her garden prepared.
7. To that end shall he raise himself therein, knowing each valley, caressing each field.
8. For he may not have concern over the crop, but yea, ye Master of Hosts, how he loveth the plowing thereof.
9. And in the stillness therein, the fields rejoiceth in his touch, yea, rejoiceth in his touch.
10. For in that rise, in that scourging, in that passion, there shall be peace.
11. Within Her ever-fertile thighs shall the Babe become a Man, a Master of Her Temple, lighting a fire which cannot be quenched except through the blood that is the life.

12. And in the time of the reaping, the Master of those fields comes unto the Man, who comes unto his Master, and drunken upon the wine of the Communion of Saints, ever shall She rejoiceth when the Babe become Man takes Her as wife.
13. Yea, takes Her as wife.
14. And thereby cometh hurt, and joy, and bliss.
15. And thereby cometh hurt, and joy, and bliss.
16. For in the tending of the fields, and rolling amidst the grapes with his Master making wine, he gives unto her a child.
17. Yea, a child, without which the Master and the Man cannot be One.
18. In the Mystery of this Birth is the Magus born and brought unto his Mother's palaces.
19. Yea, unto the palaces of that shining city, where the product of Her boundless fertility is shewn unto all, and the majesty of Her creation, now and forever, cannot be denied.
20. But more of that Mystery it shall never be said.

(November 24, 2019, 8:15 a.m-8:39 a.m.)